

Public note

Bruno Pedro

Monday, January 24, 2022

I would, if anything, reverse the maxim: “Buy things, not experiences!” Sure, the Lambo might still be a waste of money, but thoughtfully chosen material goods can enable new activities can enrich your life, extend your capabilities, and deepen your understanding of the world. And if ever more affordable material goods can build up a measure of independence from the ever more expensive services that actually consume people’s income, that would be a trade to be proud of.

Found on Buy Things, Not Experiences — harold lee on 2022-01-24 15:46:40.
Tags: #philosophy #opinion #life